

The Winter Views is gorgeous! We are on the Niagara Escarpment in Beaver Valley. The magazine is sitting in every home I visited over the holidays. Keep writing :)

I finally managed to get a copy of your magazine, even though I had given up on finding one of this issue — snagged one at the Pancake Factory. I haven't finished it yet but it looks like a great publication, looking forward to reading it all.

We have just received amazing feedback. It was a wonderful article. It looks beautiful. People are thrilled at that magazine, the copy. Somebody did a pdf and it travelled all through the States and we received great reviews. We've received a great deal of phone calls from community members that need support and assistance with illegal activities surrounding hound hunting and that kind of thing. It's been a real plus to expose folks to getting some educational outreach and support. We really appreciate NEViews for putting that information out there. It's very, very progressive. On behalf of Coyote Watch Canada, our board and advisory council, we do thank you so much for that opportunity.

Re: "Co-existing with Coyotes" by Chris Mills, Winter 2014-2015:
 Reading the title on the front cover of Niagara Escarpment Views sparked my interest in reading the article. I have found this subject material fascinating and am always delighted to see coyotes in my travels. After reading the article however, I was left with the opinion that the article was one sided and missed an opportunity to further the knowledge of this "new" creature by Ontarians. Certain key facts are not mentioned in this article. My understanding is that the greatest threat to Ontario coyotes is not a gun but the disease mange. In addition, I understand that government officials are indicating that this adaptable creature's numbers are not threatened by guns and their range and numbers are actually increasing.

When the author describes the elimination of wolves during pioneer times, we must keep these events in context. Ontario's pioneers had limited food sources and could not afford the destruction of the family milk cow or other livestock by wolves.

When the author mentions the aspects of Ontario farmers making money on coyote-killed livestock, my understanding is there are investigations into these claims. If the investigator determines that the kill was caused by coyotes, the farmer receives market compensation (within certain limits) for the animals. If the animal has breeding value beyond market value, there may be a loss for the farmer. In any event few farmers would view these claims as making money. I also understand that if a baby calf or lamb is killed by coyotes and there is no visible evidence, there is no compensation. Again, not a money maker for a farmer.

This article also fails to mention the death by a Canadian hiker/jogger in Cape Breton which officials indicate was caused by coyotes. In my own neighbourhood, the advance of these hybrid coyotes has pretty much eliminated any sightings of ground hogs. It also seems to me that these larger hybrid coyotes have expanded their prey and have become significant consumers of deer. Being extremely clever these hybrids have been known to prey on new-born fawns and have killed calves as they are being borne. A time when these creatures are particularly vulnerable. Currently my experience with coyotes has been that they have become habituated to human beings. In our local paper there was a warning recently about coyotes as a Lab puppy was taken from its backyard by a coyote and consumed.

I am not a coyote hunter and I try to have an open mind on this subject. I applaud the co-existence with coyotes but also appreciate a fair depiction of a subject that is controversial to some. Look forward to the next issue.

Councillor Rick Craven, Burlington City Councillor, is a subscriber to the Niagara Escarpment Views magazine. He recently received a copy of the Winter 2014–2015 edition which features the article “Co-existing with Coyotes”. Councillor Craven has been receiving phone calls regarding coyote sightings in Aldershot. He feels that the article featured in N.E.Views is very positive and would like to share it with his constituents. Is the article available on the web or is there any way that we can share an electronic version with the residents in Aldershot?

◀ Editor’s note: After we received this message, we delivered a supply of Winter copies to Burlington City Hall.

I was born and grew up on the prairies so I know all about those beautiful animals, the coyotes. I also witnessed one of the most beautiful man made things on earth, the railway steam locomotive. Re the “Being in the right Place” article in your Niagara Escarpment Views, we can go one better. We have former CPR steam locomotive #136. She was built in 1883, before Canada was a nation.

So what happened to these trespassing idiots? Did the OPP charge them with trespassing or anything at all? A good thing to remember is “Any time is train time, stay OFF the tracks!”

Michael, via www.NEViews.ca

Why would any business jeopardize their livelihood thru tragic events on the whims of idiotic ideas from patrons. Limo drivers have the means of contacting their offices and the discretion of refusal, since they are at the controls. No business in their right mind would ever entertain such recklessness with possible endangerment. Sadly, in this case, the driver was no better than the limo’s occupants. The driver and the business should be included in the charges for trespassing. This blatant and total disregard of signage warnings and associated dangers is all too common in our society.

Enjoyed [Don Scallen’s] article in the [Spring 2014 issue of] NEV on Jefferson Salamanders. I did not realize they mate so early in the spring.
